General Research Resources on the Web

- Google Scholar (http://resolver.library.cornell.edu/misc/5973209)

Google Scholar provides a simple way to broadly search for scholarly literature. From one place, you can search across many disciplines and sources: peer-reviewed papers, theses, books, abstracts and articles, from academic publishers, professional societies, preprint repositories, universities and other scholarly organizations. Google Scholar helps you identify the most relevant research across the world of scholarly research.-About Google scholar.

- Internet Public Library (http://ipl.org)

Quick guide to online reference.

- Paperboy (http://www.thepaperboy.com/)

Provides links to more than 5,000 newspapers world-wide. One can select the country interest and the newspapers available online will appear. Choice of language will often be available to the user.

- RefDesk.com (http://www.refdesk.com)

Refdesk is a free web site that indexes and reviews current web-based reference resources.

- Search Engine Colossus (http://www.searchenginecolossus.com/)

International Directory of Search Engines, which allows you to identify country-specific search engines.

-
  SmallTownPapers (http://www.smalltownpapers.com/browse.php)

Choose from over 250 small town newspapers you can read free every week. Browse and search scanned newspaper archive from 1865 up to the current edition.

- Washington Post Business A to Z Glossary
  (http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp- dyn/business/specials/glossary/index.html)

Search for terms or from definitions. Also search by first letter. Requires registration.

-
  0Wikipedia (http://www.wikipedia.org)

Wikipedia is a free web-based encyclopedia that is user-authored and user-maintained. Use Wikipedia wisely to get an overview of a topic and links to authoritative sources. Beware of entries that could reflect author-biases and of entries that lack proper citation.