A Little Extra Can Go A Long Way

It may shock you to learn that New York drivers of noncommercial vehicles are only required to maintain a minimum liability coverage of $25,000 for bodily injury resulting from an automobile accident. So, when the distracted driver behind you plows into your car breaking your back during the morning rush, if that driver has the minimum $25K coverage, that's all you will likely be able to recover.

But there is a way to assure the wellbeing of you and your family, should you be injured due to the fault of another. All New York drivers are entitled to obtain Supplementary Uninsured/Underinsured Motorist (SUM) insurance under their own automobile insurance policy. This is additional coverage that is available if a driver with minimum liability insurance causes damages which exceeds the $25K coverage. The good news is that SUM coverage is typically very affordable and advisable for all New York Motorists to carry given the high volume of motor vehicle accidents which occur in the metropolitan area. If you or a loved one is involved in a motor vehicle collision or you have questions concerning SUM coverage, please do not hesitate to call us.
